Signs of the Times

Planet 9

Simultaneously, on January 20, 2016, dozens of media outlets announced that another planet in the solar system had been discovered. It quickly became obvious that this was not a planet but the Sun's dark unlit binary, long described by the Zetas as being 18.74 Sun-Pluto distances away. The newly named discovery by a pair of astronomers called this object Planet 9, stating that it lay 20 Sun-Pluto distances away.

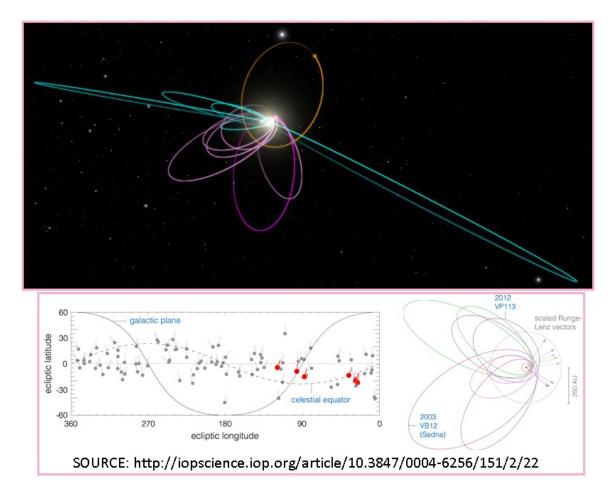

ZetaTalk Description 10/15/1995: The Earth and the dark star that is the second foci of [Nibiru's] orbit do not rotate around each other any more than the planets in your Solar System rotate around each other. This second foci of the 12th Planet has not been located by your astronomers because it is dark, not lit, and does not happen to block any view your astronomers are particularly interested in. They think it empty space. Unlike the Sun, this dark twin never lit. Although comparable in size and mass, its composition was subtly different, and it has no potential for becoming a lit sun under the present conditions in your part of the Universe. It has no planets of any size to mention, though is orbited by a lot of trash. Should one wish to search for it, it stands at an angle of 11 degrees off the Earth's orbital plane around the Sun, in the same direction we have given for the approach of [Nibiru]. Not being a luminous body, and not giving off any radiation detectable by human devices, you will be unable to locate it, but this does not mean that it is not there.

ZetaTalk Description 11/15/1999: [Nibiru] is circling on a long elliptical orbit around the sun and its dead companion which lies at a distance some 18.724 times the length from the sun to Pluto.

ZetaTalk Description 2001: For those not closed minded, we will describe the eccentric orbit of Planet X, between your Sun and its dark twin. This unlit binary sun lies some 18.74 times the distance from your Sun to Pluto, at a 11 degree angle from the ecliptic, in the direction of the constellation of Orion.

The news about the newly discovered Planet 9 was treated to a media blitz, appearing in Time, on CNN, in USA Today, on CBS, in the Daily Mail, and BBC, NPR, Russia's RT, the New Yorker magazine, the Denver Post, and IOP Science among others. The Zetas, as usual, explained.

A Giant, Unknown Planet might Exist in our Outer Solar System January 20, 2016

http://www.pbs.org/newshour/rundown/a-giant-unknown-planet

Astronomers at the California Institute of Technology announced on Wednesday they'd found evidence for a massive, faraway planet. If true, it would constitute the ninth planet in our solar system, an honor once bestowed on Pluto, which has since been demoted to dwarf-planet status. They've nicknamed the new object Planet Nine. Planet Nine's mass is believed to be about 10 times that of Earth, and it's distance, 20 times farther away from the sun than Pluto. Evidence of its existence comes instead from dwarf planets and other icy objects around it.

Astronomers say a Neptune-sized Planet Lurks beyond Pluto January 20, 2016

http://www.sciencemag.org/news/2016/01/feature-astronomers

The new evidence comes from a pair of respected planetary scientists, Konstantin Batygin and Mike Brown of the California Institute of Technology (Caltech) in Pasadena, who prepared for the inevitable skepticism with detailed analyses of the orbits of other distant objects and months of computer simulations. Scientists say their calculations stack up. Batygin and Brown inferred its presence from the peculiar clustering of six previously known objects that orbit beyond Neptune. If Planet X is out there, Brown and Batygin say, astronomers ought to find more objects in telltale orbits, shaped by the pull of the hidden giant. But Brown knows that no one will really believe in the discovery until Planet X itself appears within a telescope viewfinder. They hope other astronomers will join in the hunt.

ZetaTalk Explanation 1/23/2016: Why is this article simultaneously exploding on major media? It is not describing Nibiru, aka Planet X. It is describing the Sun's binary twin, which we have described as being 18.74 Sun-Pluto distances away from the Earth's Sun. Note this object, termed Planet 9, is described as being "20 times farther away from the sun than Pluto". Precisely. Zetas right again! We have described this binary twin since the start of the ZetaTalk saga, and the perturbations caused by this binary twin of the Sun have been known to ancient astronomers.

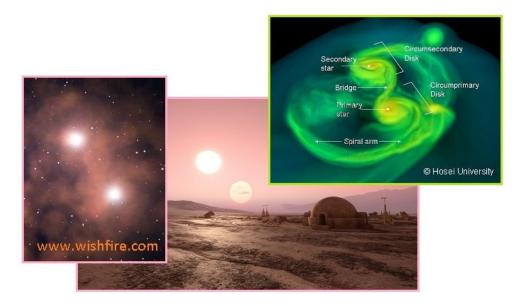

There is great confusion between the Sun's binary twin and Nibiru, a planet that orbits both foci. Nibiru comes from the direction of the binary twin, and returns in that direction. In the early 1980's, what is now being termed Planet 9 was being termed Nemesis, and is the reason that NASA/JPL went looking for the source of this perturbation in 1983 with an infrared balloon sent above the atmosphere. They found an object out in the direction of Orion. Nibiru, at that time, was approaching for its next passage around the Sun. A front page article in the Washington Post, published December 31, 1983 documented this search.

What is the reason for the media blitz at this time? Astronomers are clearly aware of the Sun's binary twin, and the existence of Nibiru, and have for decades been severely repressed from speaking about these issues. Many deaths have resulted to keep this secret, on the excuse that the public would panic if they knew. Now that Nibiru is so visible that the public is regularly seeing a Second Sun and the brilliant Moon Swirls, as well as the body of Nibiru itself with its double helix of its two most dominant Moon Swirls, the announcement is viewed as inevitable. We have described the planned announcement as a multi-pronged event that cannot be sabotaged. This is one of the prongs.

Indeed, the notion that our Sol is part of a binary system is not new. Most stars are part of a binary system, as the Star Wars representation on Tatooine depicts.

Nemesis (hypothetical star)

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Nemesis (hypothetical star)

Nemesis is a hypothetical red dwarf or brown dwarf, originally postulated in 1984 to be orbiting the Sun at a distance of about 95,000 AU (1.5 light-years), somewhat beyond the Oort cloud, to explain a perceived cycle of mass extinctions in the geological record, which seem to occur more often at intervals of 26 million years. Calculations in the 1980s suggested that a Nemesis object would have an irregular orbit due to perturbations from the galaxy and passing stars.

Nemesis Star Theory: The Sun's 'Death Star' Companion August 26, 2013

http://www.space.com/22509-binary-stars.html

More than four-fifths of the single points of light we observe in the night sky are actually two or more stars orbiting together. The most common of the multiple star systems are binary stars, systems of only two stars together. Some people even think that the sun is part of a binary system.

Dark Twin Emerges

The Zetas were asked about the Earth's Dark Twin early in the ZetaTalk saga. Yes, the rumors are true.

ZetaTalk Confirmation 10/15/1995: Your Earth has a dead twin that shares her orbit and is placed so exactly opposite the Earth that it can never be seen. Theories about the Earth's dark twin, which does exist, have been around for decades. They emerged because of the observed perturbations of the planets. This twin is close enough, within your Solar System, to be visible by the reflected rays from the Sun, if it were not hidden behind the Sun. Why do these matched planets place themselves exactly opposite? Put two ball bearings in a circular track and spin this, and you soon find that the balls are opposite each other. Just so do these two evenly matched planets find this position opposite each other.

One reason the Dark Twin is so invisible to mankind on Earth is due to its colors, coal black and lifeless. As with all black objects, the light rays are absorbed and not reflected, but the Dark Twin does reflect some blue and yellow light. Thus when the Earth halted in her orbit in December, 2003 when finding Nibiru in her path, the Dark Twin emerged from behind the Sun. At that time the public was astonished to see this blue/yellow light in the evening sky. Of course, the establishment did not explain.

New York City, New York

I know that it was at least 3 times bigger than Venus has ever appeared. Possibly more. Obviously it was bigger than a normal star because I thought it was a light on a building. And the color also! That yellow was flaming yellow! Then two minutes later - blue! The map I pulled up for NYC shows that Venus is not visible at that time. I know it wasn't Venus, but that's about it. Why? Well, for one Mars and other objects were right next to Venus and the object I saw was off by itself just sort of hanging there. I was walking toward the West in NYC (West Side). NYC is skewed in terms of true directions. Going according to actual directions (by using where the Sun sets) I was walking NW.

Sydney, Australia

I see it every day slightly west NW. It is extremely bright as the Sun sets then reduces in magnitude to about the brightness of Sirius it does actually change colour from yellow to blue then disappears below the horizon by about 9 PM.

Netherlands

In the Netherlands it's also visible for quite a while now. First, I thought it was just Venus but I have the feeling it gained in brightness over the weeks. Also it's color has turned from white to more yellow, I believe. Last night I was outside at approx. 01:00 and it was still visible and I don't believe that Venus would still visible that late. There was a light haze so I could only see this in the WNW and the two brightest stars from Orion in the WSW.

ZetaTalk Explanation 4/19/2004: Why does the Dark Twin appear on the horizon, briefly, as a large yellow planet, the color and size changing back and forth to a tiny blue star? These are the colors least absorbed by the twin, thus most reflected.

Thereafter, the Dark Twin made an appearance as it came up behind the Earth in her stalled orbit. This was covered on January 27, 2013 in Issue 329 of this newsletter and on September 28, 2014 in Issue 417. Per the Zetas, it will pass the Earth during the Last Weeks, but meanwhile it is trying to avoid a clash with the Earth by moving behind the Earth.

ZetaTalk Newsletter Page 5 of 8

ZetaTalk Explanation 9/13/2014: We predicted that the Dark Twin would try to pass the Earth in their shared orbit, moving out further into space and sliding behind the Earth. In these webcam photos, the Dark Twin seems to move about, and this is due to the blooming effect, light pulled toward Earth's gravity and likely also the Moon's gravity. Where this 2014 view is looking West, the Dark Twin is still not quite directly behind the Earth as yet.

The Dark Twin continues to be captured in photos, puzzling those who see it as the establishment has not been willing to admit either the influence of Nibiru or the existence of the Dark Twin. It was captured in photos and hit the media on April 25, 2015 in California and on July 31, 2015 in Italy.

Mysterious Blue Light in California Night Sky April 25, 2015

http://www.theblaze.com/stories/2015/04/06/californians-report-blue-light

Residents in Bakersfield, California, have seen an unidentified blue light in the night sky on the same day for two months in a row now. The light appeared on Feb. 14 and March 14, but no one knows officially what's causing it. Jeff Castruita told the news station he watched it for about 10 minutes. "It was just doing weird stuff. It would turn on and off and it would disappear," he said, according to KERO. "It wasn't a regular airplane or a drone, it was much bigger than what a drone would be, especially at that distance." Ricardo Pantoja said.

Foreign Object is Photographed near the Moon in Patos August 2, 2015

http://patosonline.com/post.php?codigo=49009

Late on Friday (31/07), many lenses were pointed in the direction the moon. Jozivan Antero pointed the lens of his Nikon - D 5,000 for the moon. When viewing the photograph he noticed a circular object of bluish color in sight. He then photographed other times, and realized that the object (circular in shape) had changed position, but was close to the natural satellite.

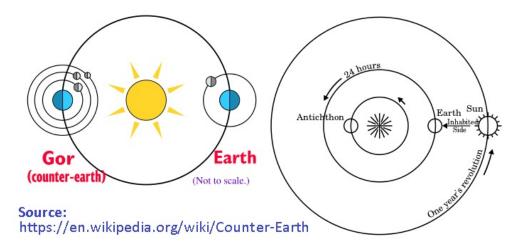

In step with the pending announcement admitting that Nibiru exists, and given that the Earth's Dark Twin is likely to be looming close to the Earth at some point as it prepares to pass the Earth and move on in their shared orbit, the establishment may be trying to educate the public. Thus, this recent article about Earth 2.0.

Is 'Earth 2.0' Planet Hiding Behind the Sun? January 16, 2016

http://www.dailystar.co.uk/news/weird-news/487744/counter-earth

The mind-blowing theory dates back to an ancient Greek wiseman called Philolaus – who called the planet "Counter Earth". Scientists have struggled to disprove the seemingly incredible claim as believers say the Sun – which is more than 100 times the size of Earth – would always keep it hidden. A planet with the same mass as ours and the same distance from the Sun could share Earth's orbit, according to Counter Earth theory. The US Air Force paid a group of scientists dubbed the "Condon Committee" to look into the possible existence of a Counter Earth as part of the University of Colorado UFO Project. The group found the "anti-Earth", which they called Clarion, would become visible in the morning or evening twilight and during total solar eclipses within just over a century. The 1968 report, the Scientific Study of Unidentified Flying Objects, said: "Differences introduced by the presence of an anti-Earth (Clarion) in the motions of Venus, Earth and Mars could not have remained undetected in this period."

Indeed, the ancients were aware of this Dark Twin, which is amazing as they were still debating the Flat Earth theory. Could they have learned this information from visiting aliens? The Dark Twin, a twin of Earth in size and within the same orbit as the Earth, seems to be in the imagination of mankind, appearing in books, movies, TV series, and children's cartoons.

Counter-Earth

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Counter-Earth

The Counter-Earth is a hypothetical body of the Solar system hypothesized by the pre-Socratic Greek philosopher Philolaus (c. 470 – c. 385 BC) to support his non-geocentric cosmology, in which all objects in the universe revolve around an unseen "Central Fire" (distinct from the Sun which also revolves around it). In Philolaus' system, the Earth did not rotate and its inhabited surface faced away from the Central Fire—possibly because it (the Earth) was flat. The revolution of the Earth around the Central Fire was not yearly but daily, while the Moon's revolution was monthly, and the sun's yearly. We know that Aristotle described it as "another Earth", from which Greek scholar George Burch infers that it must be similar in size, shape and constitution to Earth.

Counter-Earth

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Counter-Earth

Such a planet could have the same orbiting velocity and path as Earth, so that if it was positioned 180 degrees from Earth, it would remain behind the Sun being blocked from view from Earth indefinitely. However, if such a planet actually existed, the laws of physics and cosmology would make it detectable from Earth for a number of reasons. A Counter-Earth would have gravitational influence (perturbation) upon the other planets, comets and man-made probes of the Solar System. Researchers have detected no such influence, and indeed space probes sent to Venus, Mars and other places could not have successfully flown by or landed on their targets if a Counter-Earth existed, as the navigational calculations for their journeys did not take any putative Counter-Earth into account.

Fictional Planets of the Solar System https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Fictional planets of the Solar System

- Judge Dredd (1977-), comic strip in the 2000 AD comic anthology. Hestia is a planet which orbits the Sun at nearly the same distance as the Earth but at such an angle to the ecliptic plane that it was not discovered until 2009. It is inhabited by a small colony of humans and an intelligent indigenous population who keep their distance from the colonists.
- The Adventures of Superman radio series, episode 1 (debuting February 12, 1940): the planet Krypton is said to be "situated on the other side of the Sun" from the Earth.
- Beyond the Sun/The Hidden Planet, a scripted but unfilmed early story for Doctor Who, was set on a counter-Earth that was almost an exact duplicate of Earth. This idea was reused in the original series (1966) as Mondas, the original home of the Cybermen.
- Sport Billy, 1979 television cartoon: the eponymous hero is from the counter-Earth Olympus, populated by athletic god-like beings.
- Dinosaucers, 1987 television cartoon: premised on intelligent dinosaurs coming to Earth from a counter-Earth called Reptilon.
- Doppelgänger, 1969 film by Gerry Anderson. Counter-Earth is identical to Earth in every respect except that left and right are reversed. Marketed in the US as Journey to the Far Side of the Sun.

Goggle and the Pope

Google executives are meeting with the Pope, and the public is curious. Per the Zetas, the Pope is encouraging them to stay on their current track.

Pope Francis to Join Google's Eric Schmidt in Rare Tech Industry Meeting January 13, 2016

http://www.theguardian.com/world/2016/jan/13/pope-francis

Pope Francis once described the internet as a "gift from God". Pope Francis to join Google's Eric Schmidt in rare tech industry meeting. The pope, who more than a billion Catholics believe is God's representative on Earth, will meet with the powerful Silicon Valley executive and philanthropist for 15 minutes at the Vatican in Rome. Schmidt was due to meet with the pope privately along with Jared Cohen, a former US state department official who is now head of Google Ideas. Schmidt co-wrote a book with Cohen in 2013 called The New Digital Age: Reshaping the Future of People, Nations and Business.

ZetaTalk Newsletter Page 8 of 8

ZetaTalk Comment 1/16/2016: The Internet will be central to informing, or disinforming the public in the near future. Goggle has gobbled up other networks so it is the giant in the field. Some wealthy elite have made efforts lately to provide a type of Internet to the public that will be used only to control what the public hears. This is not unlike how the press or major media outlets conduct business now, deciding the spin on information and selectively withholding or including information. Thus Google can be a force for good, or for evil, in the near future. They are on a good track now, and Pope Francis is seeking to boost their confidence in this regard.
